The Korean Society of Gastrointestinal Endoscopy (KSGE) has been hosting the International Digestive Endoscopy Network (IDEN) since 2011. IDEN 2016 was held at the Grand Hilton Hotel, Seoul, Korea, from June 24 to 26, 2016. The KSGE collaborated with the American Society for Gastrointestinal Endoscopy (ASGE) in hosting the KSGE-ASGE joint sessions in the conference.

At IDEN 2016, many physicians and researchers from all over the world participated to present and discuss the latest advances in the field of upper gastrointestinal (GI), lower GI, and pancreatobiliary endoscopies. The scientific programs included live demonstrations of cutting-edge practice and skills in GI endoscopy. A total of 82 speakers were invited from overseas and Korea. The program consisted of more than 27 sessions with live demonstrations, lectures, case-based discussions, oral presentations by Asian Young Endoscopist Award

(AYEA) 2016 participants and 154 poster presentations. IDEN 2016 also included special programs such as the AYE and Young Endoscopist Forum for young endoscopists from Asian countries. AYE participants received clinical training in GI endoscopy at selected endoscopy training centers for 2 weeks before the IDEN in Korea. They acquired valuable learning in these programs. The number of participants was over 776, reflecting the great interest of the medical community from all over the world.

The seminars have contributed much to the spread of knowledge about GI endoscopy. Indeed, the IDEN has become among the most attractive international conferences held in Korea. Next year, IDEN will be held in June 2017.
